Higher-Order Functions in Spark

Higher-Order Functions in Spark

- Higher-order functions are functions that take other functions as parameters or return functions as results.
- In Spark, higher-order functions are used to perform operations on collections of data, such as DataFrames, and Datasets.
- They allow for more expressive and concise code, enabling developers to write complex transformations and aggregations in a functional programming style.

User defined Functions

Higher Order Functions